A Parent's Part in Cloverbuds

4-H is a family affair! An important part of the family affair is YOU, the parent. As parents get involved with their children in 4-H, this interaction provides ways for the family to connect by learning new skills, sharing hands on growth opportunities, and serving the community together. By being involved in 4-H, parents can ensure the best growth experience for their child or children. Parents are encouraged to join as volunteers.

What 4-H Teaches

4-H deals with the growth and development of people. 4-H is a series of learning experiences designed with the "whole" child in mind. Through "hands on" learning experiences, participating in any 4-H program involves:

HEAD Thinking & learning, solving problems, making decisions and setting goals

HEART Caring, determining personal and family values, respecting and supporting one another

HANDS Using new skills to create, build, design or shape

HEALTH Forming attitudes, habits, and lifestyles that enhance well-being
